

From Borian

What has happened, is all our collective energy got thrown into a pot that the bankers think they own. By your consent, they legally do. For whatever reason we've been bamboozled, tricked into thinking you have to DO/WORK/SLAVE to get some of that energy returned to you in order to just survive. They are hoarding and dishing back to only those that serve their interests. If you are financially "suck-cessful" in this construct its only an equal reflective mirror marker showing you how deep into the fiction you really are. If you feel entitled to a higher "wage", it's only because your employer is "gambling" that you'll keep your head up your ass further. Their depending on you to mock, criticize, and belittle those "under" you to keep the scam going. Arguing over slave salaries is like a competition to see who can eat the most of their masters shit. The bankers and their society construct is a fraudulent sham that you VOLUNTEER to play in. But But But, we need money in order to survive. Nope. Only if you are willing to trade your LIVING creative energy for a DEAD fictional banker...
...we are fully capable of providing our own food water shelter clothing and happiness ...it's only been the last hundred years that we've forgotten who and what we are. Either your hands are clean or they are not. Who's feeding off YOUR energy?