

Borian Phoenix

Simple as this, using a legal name is proof of implied consent to be under the LEGAL contract of its use

You do not have to use one. How can I prove this?

Simple. Prove to me that I must...you can not. What can not be proved is legally called fiction. Frivolous gibberish

Without my consent or agreement, there's no contract, legal lawful implied or otherwise...one simply does not exist

For example, you move to a new neighborhood and the guy that cuts your neighbors lawn every Saturday cuts yours too. Two months later he bills you $800 for his services. Since you never said anything, it was assumed and presumed you consented. However, without a handshake or acknowledgment or eye contact or a signature, without a meeting of the minds with both parties in consent with full disclosure and an agreement, no legal contract exists. The lawn guy is shit outta luck no matter what service he provided

You're not gonna pay for something you didn't agree to

It's the same way with a legal name. It's a contract you never agreed to. However, while you still use one, it's assumed and presumed you agree with the implied contract of using such property

Until you make it publicly known what your intentions are, the implied contract is valid (even if only in your head). By your actions you are known to the universe

The game is over. The legal construct is fraudulent and fictional. At any time you can stop participating. Once fraud is revealed on a contract it becomes invalid immediately and any contract you signed with a legal name is null and void once upon discovering the above truth

Time has run out for those perpetuating the biggest scam in universal history. It was a good run though

Piper down!!

Legal Name Fraud...Google that shit

